HOW NEBRASKA'S SENATOR MADE HIS GREAT ENDURANCE SPEECH
OF 24 HOURS.

On Christmas day the United States Senate was graced by the presence of William Vincent Allen, easily the foremost of Populist statesmen and the greatest endurance speaker ever heard in the halls of Congress. His huge, massive built form is a familiar sight on the floor and in the corridors of the Senate, and he is well-known to the newspaper men as one of the most gracious and kindly of the members of the "Millionaire's Club." He has an opinion on every subject of popular interest, and is always willing to express it. He talks frankly and candidly and has never acquired the Roosevelt habit.
He never declined an interview and never back-tracked on a public utterance. His opinions, moreover, always carry weight, so he is undoubtedly one of the best informed men in the Senate and one of the most intellectual.

Allen's return to the Senate will meet with public approval of the people of his own State, and except for political objections will be unanimously indorsed by his fellow Senators. He has been a member of the Senate since 1892.

Hidden Beauty
In Egypt the custom is for Princesses to hide their beauty by covering their faces with a veil. In America the beauty of many of our women is hidden because of the weakness and sickness peculiar to the sex.
If the Egyptian custom pre-valled in this country, many sufferers would be glad to cover their faces with a veil.
Allen's return to the Senate will
meet with public approval of the people
cal objections will be unanimously in-
been a member of the Senate since 1892.

It has been appointed by Gov. Poynter to fill the vacancy caused by the death of M. L. Hayward and will serve until the meeting of the Nebraska Legislature in January, 1901.

The most impressive thing about Allen is his enormous size. Unlike Cy Sullivan, the Salvation Army member of the House, from Vermont, Allen is all bone and muscle. He would win out on any championship game that could be devised among the members of the two Houses calling for athletic skill and strength. Sullivan, the Vermont man, is six feet seven inches tall, but he is lanky and awkward, and would not remain in any sort of contact with Allen for ten seconds.

The best demonstration ever given of Allen's marvellous powers of endurance was his twenty-four-hour speech in the Senate.

The bill to repeal the Sherman law was before the Senate, and Allen was among those fighting it tooth and nail.
All the ordinary filibustering methods had been resorted to, and the opponents of the bill were worn out and ready to surrender, when Allen came to the front with his famous oratorical effort that lasted over twenty-four hours.

He "spelled" the champion talkers, who were worn out and incapable of further effort, and the result gained through his "big talk" enabled them to rally their forces and get in order for a renewed attack on the bill.

The scene in the Senate during the time Allen was talking resembled those in Madison Square Garden while one of the old time six day races was on. Advocates and opponents of the bill were lying around the Senate chamber all night, curled up on sofas, sleeping uneasily in chairs and on improvised couches and ready at a moment's notice to respond to a speaker's question.

It is not believed possible that Allen could talk for more than six hours at most, and it was known the friends of silver were unable to throw a man in to take Allen's place in that time.
Everything looked hopeful for the bill and the silver men were dependent upon Allen's speech to carry the day.

Allen sent a hasty message to his helpers, however, that he would hold the floor for two days if necessary, and while this was regarded as a bluff it was known that he could keep on his feet for a goodly while, and every effort was made to get the silver forces in order for the next day's work.

Allen began his speech late in the afternoon, talked all the rest of that day. At midnight he drank a cup of bouillon, ate a piece of pie and called for a pot of coffee. Then he started in again and talked until daybreak without a pause. He then ate nine raw eggs, drank more coffee and took up the thread of his argument.

During all this time no one had followed him or paid the slightest attention to what he was saying, with the exception of the poor, sleepy-eyed stenographers, who had to look on as long as he was talking.

In the press gallery a few drowsy correspondents kept watch waiting for something startling to develop. The Senate employees slept anywhere they could and yearned for a chance to go home.

At noon the next day Allen was still talking, with no apparent intention to stop. The silver men had by this time straightened out their game and were ready for a new assault on the bill.

Allen was told that he might slip at the breakfast table, but he went on back to the leaders that a speech of such stupendous proportions needed a properly built perforation, and when he started in upon this with the statement, "Now, Mr. President, a few words in conclusion," he spoke for four hours and forty minutes. He sat down without any evidence of exhaustion, and was apparently ready to carry out his threat to talk two days.

Senator Allen was ordinarily a man of kindly nature and gentle manners, but on one occasion when he became aroused in Washington it is of record that he declared the aid of a speech of "rough house" ever known in the National Capitol. He could toss an ordinary man through the air as though he were a pillow and could go through a crowd like the grace of God through a camp meeting. This reputation was his also in the west, where weaklings are not admired.

A Life and Death Fight.
Mr. W. A. Hines, of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after ex-posure, and after a long and weary which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must die. Then I began to use Dr.
King's New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $100. bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00.
Trial bottle free at Perry & Thomas' drug store.

In the battle of Gopote river, which Gen. Lowson said was the hottest fire he had ever been under, his little son was by his side, and preserved the same coolness as his father. A bullet struck the sand squarely between the boy's feet and threw up the dust. He looked down and exclaimed, with a twinkle in his eye: "Papa, that was a twinkle."

Senator Harrel's sin in the eyes of the "Honorable Election" recalls seems to be, instead of delivering the goods to the purchaser, he delivered the bribe into the hands of the law. There are more of them besides Whalen who should be brought to justice.—Cynthiana

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Some gay and novel schemes are introduced into trimmings.
Embroidery on evening gowns continues as much in favor as ever.
A ball gown of banana colored silk is covered with tulle of the same shade, embroidered in flowers, and outlined with gold and tiny silver paillettes.
The introduction of every gay trimming into this dark cloth gown is very letting.

A novel departure of the season is black coats and costumes for little girls. They are delightfully relieved by bright trimmings. Best & Co. show a smart school costume of black camel's hair with plain skirt, and jacket with velvet collar and cuffs of bright red cloth further made chic by rows of white or black soutache braid.

A very stylish long coat of light gray cloth with flare collar of sable.
No sort of gown is more becoming to a graceful woman of the dainty type, than one of white lace with black velvet girdle.

Cold and jeweled embroideries are used on all the light colored crepe; but on black, gilt and silver are considered most stunning.
Nowadays, a gown to match the silk, satin or velvet facing the revers of a dark cloth costume, is worn.

Great care should be exercised in wearing gray. Unless it be becoming, it accentuates sallowness and all facial lines.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT OF SOUTHERN INVESTMENT CO., OF LEXINGTON, KY.
It is with pleasure that we present to our Certificate-holders our last Semi-Annual Statement. It will be seen from this, the rapid strides, the company has made during the last year.
One year ago we had assets but little over $50,000, while to-day we have over $25,000, almost double the amount we had one year ago. One year ago we had only about 10,000 coupons in force, while to-day we have 19,000, and we have paid certificate-holders a sum total of over $265,000.00. One year ago we had but little business outside of Kentucky, while to-day we number among our investors some of the best business men in nearly every State in the Union.

It is a well-known fact that the problem of securing first class agents and representatives is one of the hardest with which the management has to confront. During this period we have largely increased our agency force and have materially raised the standard of the class of men who are representing us throughout the country. It has always been our aim to secure the best class of representatives possible, men of high character and of high ability, and will not resort to any means to sell it upon misrepresentations.

Our certificate-holders, we are glad to say, during the period, have heartily co-operated with us in helping to secure new business. This has aided us materially in making the splendid progress which we have made, and we sincerely thank them for the efforts they have made in our behalf.

A KENTUCKY COMEDY OF ERRORS.
[From the Puck Country News.] There is a story of a young lady who was much admired and courted by a young man, who one day kissed her against her will. It made her furious, and she indignantly exclaimed: "If you dare kiss me again, I'll tell my father!"

She meant it, but he took it for the usual feminine bluff of such occasions and repeated the blow on the spot. She ran out of the room to the back porch where her father had just finished oil-ing his gun.

But by the time she arrived there she found out she was as good as shot.
She thought she was, and hatching up an excuse for sudden appearance, said: "Papa, go in and show Mr. Blank your gun. He is a great authority on birds and game!" "I will," said the father, who was an enthusiastic sportsman, and he made for the parlor, gun in hand.

When her father entered the parlor that young man didn't even wait to say good-bye; nor was he particular about his manner or place of exit. He broke through the window and struck a speed he thought would distance the gun as well as the old man.

It was with difficulty the father overcame him a few days later, and explained; then a month later before the girl could persuade him she had not intended a practical joke. But he mollified now, and goes to see her,
